Excerpt from Scionji-Harada Hemoris.

Chapter 101 (14 October 1933)

As the Treaty revision year 1 936, is approaching, according to the plane of the Army and Navy for cooperative action in constructing national defense, we must complete the national defense pland before that period. In other words, although we intend to settle international affairs by diplomacy, since it may fail or the situation become serious, we must complete defensive preparations, lost we should be paralysed or be underrated by foreign countries. In this sence, these plans are to perfect military proparations, and by no means, to start an aggressive war. I think that the previous conference tentatively agreed upon a national defense system designed for defensive purposes only.
